

See a little of Manchester on Monday & all return together to Liverpool - for I mean to see you embark - & my father will come to be there.

I am glad to hear dear Thompson is thinking of joining you - I have written him, the plan I meant to propose to you.

In haste, but with sincerity & affection believe me to be,
Your unchangeable friend Olyth Pease

My father & I arrived here last even^g - Mother remains in London till the mid^dle or end of next week.

& that short future, in which we shall ^{be} permitted to enjoy your society. G. J. writes that you intend reaching Liverpool tomorrow, but does not say whether by the morning or evening packet. Fair w? I hope the former - then you can come here at once. - In either case I w? say, come here & join us at The Royal Hotel & give us the heart-felt-pleasure of entertaining you here, as we shall not be able to do so under our own roof. If you can be with us any part of tomorrow, or even by the early train the next morning, (sh? you arrive too late for the railway tomorrow evening) - we might ~~be~~ spend the Sabbath together, humiliating; how intensely humiliating & mortifying is it, to think of the reception England gave you, & feel myself - an Englishwoman.

And men whom we would call great & noble, been met with shy looks & a cold reserve - not a censure sh^d have es-caped my lips - but when such are offered to the really great - to God's own nobility - the creator himself - is disho-noured & the perpetrators, in the eyes of those who love ex-cellence, for its own sake to a certain extent, dejected.
But I took not my pen - to write chit-chat upon the past, but to plan & arrange for the present.

Manchester 31st - Just Friday afternoon

My dear Friends
 W. L. G. & H. B.

It delights me to find that you have at last met a reception from British hearts & on British soil, in some small degree, worthy of you, & honorable to those who give
 it. Remember - Farlington is far nearer to Edinburgh & Glasgow than to London & I trust nearer akin in spirit - we claim to be half-Scotch - in this case would that we were wholly so! - How
